Material

Recycled fibres Pulp from recycled fibres is produced from print house and office waste paper as raw material. The process includes different cleaning, de-inking and conditioning steps using high-tech equipment.

Using recycled fibres in the recipe to produce the tissue paper brings noticeable environmental benefits :

- Less forest land usage per tonne of tissue produced
- Considerable decrease in energy consumption
- Significant reduction of acidification potential due to less air emissions (SO2, NOX) from production processes. The acidification means the increase of the PH in the atmosphere that hence causes the acid rain with its negative consequences.
- Substantial reduction of aquatic oxygen depletion potential due to less discharges to water (COD, N, P). Aquatic oxygen depletion occurs when the organic mater present in the water degrades and therefore consumes oxygen. Reduction of oxygen in the water bodies endangers aquatic life.
